TOPSY TURVY

Uncle Tom is playing a banjo outside a cabin while Krazy Kat and his pals are dancing to the tunes. Ignatz, who is Simon Legree comes in and snaps his whip at them and they all go back to work in the cotton fields.

Krazy Kat is picking cotton and an old man gets up and pulls in his whiskers which the feline had been pulling by mistake. Simon Legree sees Krazy Kat relaxing and bawls him out for not picking enough cotton. Krazy Kat gets a bar of soap and fills up the basket with soap-suds which have the appearance of the cotton. The boss seds the supposed basket of cotton and is very happy. Eventually the soap bubles start leaving the basket and break. Simon Legree is terribly angry and battles with the Kat.

Krazy Kat runs away and escapes with Little Eva. They jump into an ice-wagon and start rowing down the river. The cakes of ice fall out of the rear of the wagon and Simon Legree chases them with three blood-hounds dressed as detectives. He finally catches Krazy Kat and beats him up and his nine lives start leaving for Heaven. Whenthe eighth is on its way up, the feline pleads with it to stay and the angels entice it upward. Krazy Kat finally wins out and all is well.

THE END.
